

Battleships

Level: pre-intermediate

- Divide the class into pairs or groups A and B.
- Each player (team) draws two 10x10 grids on their paper. The grids should be labeled with letters across the top (A through J) and numbers down the side (1 through 10). One of the grids should be labeled "Self" and the other labeled "Opponent."
- Each player (team) then decides where to place his five ships: a five-space aircraft carrier, a four-space battleship, a three-space submarine, a three-space cruiser and a two-space destroyer. Students use word lists to choose words containing particular numbers of letters required.
- None of the ships may be placed diagonally; they must all be placed in straight lines either horizontally or vertically. It is legal (but not required) for two or more ships to be adjacent to each other.
- The ships are marked by writing appropriate words in spaces.
- Players take turns taking shots at each other. A shot is taken by calling out the coordinates of a space on the 10x10 grid.
- Each player takes one shot at a time.
- If the player calls the coordinates of a space where a ship is located, his opponent tells him so by saying "hit." If he missed, his opponent says "miss."
- It is allowed to guess letters hidden in the ships as it is in Hangman, so e.g. if you think your opponent's aircraft carrier represents the word ALIBI and you have just guessed some of the letters correctly, you can just say what the whole word is and your opponent has to admit that you have hit and sunk his ship.
- Players should take care to mark the shots they take on their "Opponent" grid, and whether each shot was a hit or a miss, so that they don't call any space more than once. Players may also mark the "Self" grid with shots taken by their opponent.
- A ship is sunk when all of its squares have been hit. When this happens, the player whose ship was sunk says, for example, "You sank my battleship."
- The first player to destroy all of his opponent's ships wins the game.
